

Navigation-grade MEMS gyroscopes: status and perspectives

Giacomo Langfelder

Abstract: A second dawn for MEMS inertial sensors is occurring, thanks to several applications requiring more and more performing sensors, eventually leading to inertial grade accelerometers and gyroscopes. Focusing on the latter, this talk will review the devices that in the literature have shown the best performance and will give perspectives towards future developments.